

Royal Spotlight Turns on Prince Henry

Lady Mary Scott (left), Prince Henry, and Lady Mary Thynne

By Central Press
LONDON.—The persistent back-slash of Edward, Prince of Wales, and the reports, given credence in inner circles, that it is unlikely the Duchess of York will ever be a mother, have served to throw the spotlight upon Prince Henry, third son of the sovereign of Great Britain, and the marriage planned for him.

Two young women, Lady Mary Scott, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, and Lady Mary Thynne, daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Bath, have been mentioned in this connection, but it is Lady Mary Scott who is expected to be his companion at the altar.

It is now considered unlikely that the Prince of Wales will ever marry. The Duke of York has been married almost two years and the duchess shows no indication of providing an heir to the throne. This puts the problem of succession up to Prince Henry.

To Be Made a Duke
In line with this talk is the report, emanating from Buckingham palace, that Henry will shortly be made Duke of Edinburgh by his royal father. This would give him a seat in the House of Lords. The last holder of the title was King Edward's brother, Prince Alfred, afterward Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, whose daughter is now Queen of Roumania. The title is still at the disposal of the British monarch, but it is understood King George asked Queen Marie whether she had any objection to the bestowal of her father's title on Prince Henry, and that she replied she heartily approved it, as her own son will be King of Roumania and consequently does not need a British dukedom.

Lady Mary Scott, through her father, is a direct descendant of the unhappy Duke of Monmouth, who, according to social publicists, was an illegitimate son of King Charles II of England, and Lucy Walters, Monmouth's mother, through his father's influence to Anne, Countess of Buccleuch, the young heiress of the Scots of Buccleuch.

Subsequently Monmouth was executed for leading a rebellion against his uncle, King James II. It is now believed on his knees begging his cold-blooded uncle for pardon, and how he ran about the scaffold shrieking as the executioner's sword cut off his head. Monmouth's title was extinguished at his execution, but his wife was created Duchess of Buccleuch and her honors passed to her children, who bore the family name Scott.

Destroyed the Evidence
There is strong ground for believing that King Charles II was legally married to Lucy Walters, the mother of the Duke of Monmouth. This would make his descendant, the Duke of Buccleuch, the direct male representative of the house of Stuart and entitled to the throne of Great Britain, to become the King of England. But the duke's grandfather, Lady Mary Scott's great-grandfather, out of devotion to Queen Victoria, destroyed the evidence showing him to be the legitimate representative of King Charles II.

done, let brown. Place meat on platter, arrange potatoes around, garnish with parsley. It may be necessary to add a little water occasionally while cooking meat.

When baking a meat loaf, instead of using all crackers to thicken it try using one cup of bran and a few crackers. You will find it is much better than when all crackers is used. If you have on hand any cooked oats put them in your meat loaf; will never be dry and will taste very delicious.

Keep a few of the favorite flowers by coating them completely with hot paraffin. Drop it on the flowers from a spoon. Cover the entire flower enough to hold it firm, but not to cover the color tints. Pansies, violets, hyacinths, lilacs, cannas, dahlias and lilies take this treatment very well.

Honey Dressing.—Two eggs, juice of one lemon, half cup honey. Beat these three ingredients together and cook in double boiler until thick. When ready to serve add cream until the dressing is thinned to a thick creamy consistency and pour over fruit. Garnish with red berries cut in small pieces. This salad may be varied by substituting a dressing made by shaking a small amount of the pineapple juice with a good salad dressing.

When baking fruits, line the pan with oiled paper to keep the juice from burning on the pan.

It is a good idea to keep the top drawer on the right hand side of the sewing machine empty. Then when you are sewing pull the drawer open and put in all the buttons, zippers, rawlings, etc. When the day's sewing is done the drawer may be closed on all the litter. Then at the end of the sewing session or on the regular cleaning day it may be emptied.

Croquettes.—Stew the veal during the morning, or use leftovers. Put through grinder with an onion and seasoning. Add one-third as much white sauce as meat, mold in flat round shapes, and place in ice box. When ready to serve, roll in egg and cracker crumbs and fry. In the meantime place leftover mashed potatoes in double boiler to heat, beat until creamy. Place about two tablespoons of potato on top of each croquette. Make indentation in the center of the potatoes and fill with hot buttered peas.

Fruit Salad.—Cut equal parts of pineapple, bananas, California grapes, peaches, or any combination of fruit you prefer, add a cup of celery cut in small pieces and a few nuts (if desired), and cover with honey dressing.

Perhaps this mother's experience may help some other mothers of bottle babies. She says: "Had been trying to think of some handy place for the bottle and nipples. Like many others, have no room in the kitchen for the special shelves described in various baby books. Then we saw small metal medicine cabinets on sale very cheap. We bought one and placed it just above the sink. Put three glasses on the top shelf, one for sterilized nipples, one for used ones, and one for corks. At each feeding time I take the cork from the prepared bottle, put it in cabinet and take out a nipple. After the bottle is emptied it is rinsed out well, filled with cold water and placed in bottom of cabinet. In the morning everything is ready for sterilizing. Looks much more sanitary and neat than having bottles around anywhere or even in a corner of the cupboard."
